The following text is taken from the internal records of H. P. Blavatsky's lectures to a special group of the Theosophical Society at that time.

"Civilised humanity is carefully protected by its invisible guardians, the Nirmanakayas, who watch over our cultures and nations. However, due to its collective karma, it is at the mercy of the traditional enemies of these guardians: the incarnated and disincarnated "shadow brothers". As you know, this will continue until the end of the first cycle of Kali Yuga (1897) and for several years thereafter, because the smaller black cycle sometimes overtakes the larger one.

Everything in this universe of differentiated matter has two aspects: its light and its dark side. In practice, one leads to benefit, the other to harm.'

When we speak of 'masters,' we can understand them in Blavatsky's sense as Nirmanakayas: great spirits who consciously keep open the possibility of returning to incarnation in order to serve humanity. Their opponents on a comparable mental level, on the other hand, act selfishly and seductively. They dominate the three lower levels of human evolution, but rarely incarnate themselves. Instead, they seek out suitable 'personalities' to "inspire" with selfish 'rubbish'.

Two types of such personalities can be roughly distinguished: the stupid (naive) and the paranoid, regardless of whether they are female or male.

The 'shadow brothers' make use of compliant power-hungry types who struggle for influence in politics, business and science with lies and ignorance. When they succeed, a flood of stupidity pours forth.

A striking example of this is the denial of physics and science. Climate research is based on findings in physics – those who deny the climate crisis thus deny physics itself. This makes it easy to recognise the liars and those who spread stupidity.

Those who develop algorithms for media platforms to subtly take people hostage mentally act even more cunningly.

Another group are the paranoids.

They create imaginary enemies in order to enforce authoritarian control internally and legitimise wars externally. The inspiring spirit in the shadows (which is not physically incarnated) is aware of the lie of the supposed threat. The politician controlled by him weaves this lie into his own astral constructs of conspiracies.

Typical are 'rulers' who largely withdraw from the public eye and rarely appear in reality. They work with conspiracy narratives that they themselves invent and gradually begin to believe in – a dangerous cycle of deception and self-deception.

Both types are obviously represented in two large states. The world should wake up.

A third personality, coolly calculating and without any hint of goodwill, acts cunningly in the state that seeks world domination through economic dominance. He hopes to profit from global conflicts as the laughing third party.

The spirits in the shadows hold humanity in a stranglehold with this geopolitical triangle of darkness in order to continue to enslave it.

The end of the dark age (Kali Yuga) mentioned by Blavatsky is obviously being prolonged by a smaller dark cycle. But humanity must not wait for the end, because waiting alone prolongs the darkness. Too many bad stakes have already been driven in.
